It converts pdf to text search and text to pdfQ: JS Script and PHP script? Right now, we have a static website and we want to add a javascript application and right now we have a question: Do we have to write a php program for every page, or can we use just a script, to call a page? Like when somebody click on the link, we want to run the javascript code on the page, but on the same time, the page don't reloads. Is this possible? Thanks a lot.
A: If your question is do you need a client side/server side program or do you need a single program with capabilities on both sides then it's likely you have a good yes to both. If you only need a client-side program then a server-side program is not required. If you only need the client-side program and want it to be a single program capable of both server and client-side functions then yes, you will need a server-side program. The answer depends on your exact requirement.
